Notable features:

This is a terrace built in the late 1840's and early 1850's (sallyport between 126 and 128); housing for B. & O. workers and others engaged at the plants below Pratt Street. Now they are rundown and graceless. Numbers 120 and 122 have been formstoned; vacancies at 128, 126, 122, 120, 118, 114, 108-102 make matters worse. Nor does a rundown row across Scott Street help matters. Some decision is vital for this kind of decay cannot fail to influence the quite good rows on Lombard Street.

Environmental context:

Lot at 116 is vacant and only four of 14 houses are lived in. The scale and form of this row is good and the location is convenient to jobs just below Pratt Street. Street trees and sidewalk repairs are needed.

For sale. Dwelling house, nearly new, in Scott Street, near Lombard, being convenient to the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Depot and other establishments where a great many men are employed. It will be sold cheap and on terms to suit almost any person wishing to buy a house -- a large portion of the money can be paid by the month.
